Dr. Baxter—Dear Sir:—I have been severely afflicted with Asthma for more than twenty-five years, and for months in succession have not been able to lie in bed and enjoy a regular night's rest, and some days would not be able to walk from the house to the barn, a distance of five or six rods. About a year ago I purchased two bottles of Dr. N. G. From the Christian Messenger. Home Papers.

It is for the interest of our State to give a liberal support to their own papers. We do not wish to be understood to hint by this, that we are never to patronize a city paper, but we should not patronize a foreign paper to the neglect of the home organ. If all were to do this, our country papers would be obliged to suspend, and in this case, the city papers would lose a large portion of their interest, for they are obliged to depend to a great extent upon country papers for the news from the sections where they are published. Many persons are able and willing to patronize both the local and city papers, but those who are indifferent to the success of the local press, and give their influence and means to sustain the foreign papers are discarding one of the essential means of their own prosperity. If other state and local interests were to be neglected in the same way, the country would soon be impoverished in many departments, that now serve greatly to augment its present prosperity.

We justly feel an interest in the prowess and efficiency of our Vermont soldiers, who have gone to share the toils and perils of our national defence. We expect they will do their duty, and not tarnish the reputation earned by "the Green Mountain Boys" in other days of our history. This interest in the reputation of the State is not only natural, but commendable. It has a close connection with that honest patriotism which is peculiarly valuable in these days of treason, but it should not be confined to our military operations merely, but should embrace our morality, literature, intelligence and industry. As citizens of Vermont we should be interested in every department connected with her fame and prosperity.

We are told that our Vermont boys who go from us, appreciate the sentiment "That blessings brighten as they take their flight," and that distance lends an enchantment to scenes they have left behind them.

One of our soldiers writing from the seat of war says:—

"Send me your paper. We have plenty of New York and Boston papers, but one of your papers does me more good than all the papers printed in Boston."

We are confident that any effort made by the friends of our absent soldiers, to supply them with Vermont papers, will be highly appreciated by them. The friends of the Messenger, by making an effort in this direction, can do something to aid in sustaining the paper, and at the same time be supplying valuable reading for those in our army who will have the leisure and desire to improve it.

THE GREAT STRUGGLE.—There is much involved in the present struggle of the Government to suppress this rebellion. It certainly embraces immense interest in our own country, but the results of the struggle are not confined here, they are as extensive as the hopes of humanity for the triumph of republican principles. The London correspondent of the National Intelligencer thus speaks of the shadow which has been thrown by our national calamity over foreign politics:

"There is, we think, a cause at work aiding most materially to the injury of the liberal interest, not only in England, but throughout Europe, and that is the present position of the United States. Many people—and they form, we suspect, a great majority of the human race, even in enlightened Western Europe—have retroceded from their advocacy of 'liberal' opinions and their support of progressive measures, and have become afraid of change within the last six months. The rapid rise of the United States, and the condition of wealth, power, prosperity and happiness which they had reached, was cited as a standing proof of the advantages of liberal and free institutions, and the text from which all apostles of progress deduced their teaching. And in the same proportion, the present position of the United States is held up as a proof of the danger of innovation and a warning against meddling with old and tried institutions. The civil war in America is a godsend to all the advocates of a stationary policy. If a general election was to take place at the present time we apprehend a majority of high-toned Conservatives would be elected, and if the present ministry keep in power we doubt if even the existing House of Commons would support any effective measure of reform. The world has probably been thrown back a century by the calamity which has befallen your fair country. We have not the shadow of a doubt respecting the issue, but the very fact that the present afflicting state of things has occurred, has done incalculable damage in Europe to the cause of progress."

AN ITINERANT FOR THE TIMES.—The Central Christian Advocate thus refers to a member of that Conference:

"Br. Ing, of the Missouri Conference, in his full stature of some six feet six, came to our office in his regimentals, and looked as if he could leap over a wall and run through a troop with perfect ease. When the United States army came to Rolla, he was relieved from the threats and numerous assaults of the rebels, who prepared their gallows on which to hang him. On another occasion he had a narrow escape indeed; but the Lord delivered him. The commander at Rolla, having learned his character, gave him charge of a scouting party, with which to prevent the Union men from being molested and to take leading secessionists prisoners. He performed his duties so well that he was authorized to raise a company of cavalry. He succeeded in this, and his company of some 60, to be further increased, got their uniforms and accoutrements in St. Louis a few days ago. This will form an important specimen of the cavalry that will be necessary to bring peace to Missouri. Mr. Ing, therefore, goes into the army as captain of his company. But as soon as the war is over he will at once recommence his ministerial work in Missouri, and devote himself to the ministry of the church, having furnished the necessary ministry for the State. He will then put up the sword into the sheath, and his horse will be employed to serve him in his religious work, as he served him in the battle-field."

THE NORTHERN WINTER AND THE NORTHERN ARMY.—Cold, chilly nights in Virginia—frost already appearing in the low grounds! This is a meteorological fact, full of meaning for the two armies. Our own soldiers, it is reported, are suffering somewhat—though, doubtless, by this time, the arrangements have been perfected for supplying them with blankets and other winter gear. But what must be the condition of Jeff. Davis' rebel host, sleeping blanketless in the night-fogs of Eastern Virginia, with the quicksilver down to the small figures? These hot-blooded, thin-skinned fellows from Carolina, Georgia or the Gulf States will have a chance to get some of the fire taken out of them by the sharp blasts from the Alleghenies and the cold night sea-winds. They have relied on cotton with which to bully the world; it will prove powerless to protect their own shivering limbs withal. There was a great deal of exultation in the Southern newspapers, this Spring, as to the havoc which the Southern climate would play with the Northern troops. But the tables are now turned. We have waited till the frosts set in before attempting to march into the heart of Dixie; while, meantime, the Southerners from the warm Gulf borders are quaking at the first taste of our upper latitudes. On the whole, the effects of these early frosts cannot but be to precipitate matters with the rebel forces.—From physical cowardice to moral cowardice there is but a narrow interval. Great is Fubrecht—terrible to Southerners is old Boreas!

DANCING.—Dr. Thompson, in some notes of his tour West, says of a visit to the Insane Asylum, Columbus, O.: "We attended a dance in the Asylum, the first we have seen since we were managers of a 4th of July ball, some thirty-one years ago, and had such a heavy bill to pay the fiddler. We were much pleased with this performance, which Dr. Hills manages better than we could. The music was good, and the dancing, if we are a competent judge, quite respectable, except that of an old gentleman in a blue jacket, who was a little too much excited. We would that all dancing could be confined to lunatic asylums, where it is very appropriate! Mr. Spurgeon, however, thinks it may be advantageously practiced by other than lunatics, but under three conditions; namely, that it be done in the open air, by daylight, the women dancing in one field and the men in another. How mankind will pervert things! Cards were invented for a benevolent purpose—to amuse a crazy king—yet wicked rascals have used them to make sane subjects crazy. It seems to us that dancing was invented to amuse and exercise maniacs, but, alas! it has been turned from its appropriate and benevolent purpose."
